Joseph Conrad Award May 2016

The Polish Heritage Society UK proposed that the 2016 Joseph Conrad Award go to Dr Andrew Francis, who is seeking to translate a work of the late Dr Andrzej Braun of Gdańsk, from Polish into English. The project should have all the relevant permissions later this year or early next year. Once these are acquired The Polish Heritage Society intend to release the award.

Andrzej Braun was a poet, writer and reporter and an outstanding Polish author fascinated by the life and works of Joseph Conrad-Korzeniowski.

Braun was born on August 19th, 1923 in Łódź and died on November 9th, 2008 in Warsaw.

Among Andrzej Braun's merits was the fact he was one of the main initiators of interest in the life and works of Joseph Conrad in Poland. When the Conrad Section of the Society of Friends of the Polish Maritime Museum in Gdańsk was transformed into the Polish Conradian Club, in 1975, he was elected its chairman until 1995.

Braun also published articles there and worked on the bibliography of Polish Conradiana. His last official appearance was during the inauguration of the Joseph Conrad Year in February 2007 at the Royal Castle in Warsaw.

Enigma and Polish Cryptographers Plaque in Felden, Boxmoor Hemel Hempstead 20th July 2016

Henryk Zygalski

From September 1932, Zygalski was a civilian cryptologist with the Polish General Staff's Biuro Szyfrów (Cipher Bureau) working with Marian Rejewski and Jerzy Różycki. Together they developed methods and equipment for breaking Enigma messages. In late 1938, in response to growing complexities in German encryption procedures, Zygalski designed the "perforated sheets," also known as "Zygalski sheets," a manual device for finding Enigma settings. was, from September 1932, a civilian cryptologist with the Polish General Staff's Biuro Szyfrów (Cipher Bureau) working with Marian Rejewski and Jerzy Różycki. Together they developed methods and equipment for breaking Enigma messages. After the war he remained in exile in the United Kingdom and worked, until his retirement, as a lecturer in mathematical statistics at the University of Surrey. During this period he was prevented by the Official Secrets Act from speaking of his achievements in cryptology. He died August 30, 1978, at Liss, was cremated and his ashes taken to London

Marian Rejewski

Marian Adam Rejewski, (16 August 1905 – 13 February 1980) was a Polish mathematician and cryptologist who reconstructed the Nazi German military Enigma cipher machine sight-unseen in 1932. The cryptologic achievements of Rejewski and colleagues Jerzy Różycki and Henryk Zygalski enabled the British to begin reading German Enigma-encrypted messages at the start of World War II, seven years after Rejewski's original reconstruction of the machine.

The Polish Heritage Society UK erected a plaque to two Polish Enigma code breakers Marian Rejewski and Henryk Zygalski with the officers and men of the Polish Radio Intelligence Coy.

The location of the site where the cryptographers and code breakers worked was located through research undertaken by The Polish Underground 1939-45 Study Trust and The Polish Institute and Sikorski Museum. Thanks to the close co-operation between the three organisations, The Polish Heritage Society, The Polish Underground 1939-45 Study Trust and the owner of the house, Mr James Mills Webb, it was possible to erect a plaque at the site in Felden. PHS was able to ensure full historical accuracy for the plaque, by working closely with Dr A Suchcitz, Mrs E Maresch and Mr J. Mills Webb.

The event was attended by H.E. Ambassador, Mr Witold Sobkow, Lady Verulam, Lord Lieutenant of Hertfordshire, The local Mayor, Mr Robert McClean, Sir John Dermot Turing, a Trustee of Bletchley Park and John Gallehawk, a researcher at Bletchley Park.

Mr J Mills Webb kindly offered a donation towards the event.

21 July 2000, Poland's President Aleksander Kwaśniewski posthumously awarded Poland's highest civilian decoration, the Grand Cross of the Order of Polonia Restituta, to Marian Rejewski and Henryk Zygalski. Rejewski's daughter, Janina Sylwestrzak, also received the War Medal 1939–1945 on his behalf, from the British Chief of the Defence Staff in July 2005. On 1 August 2012, Marian Rejewski posthumously received the Knowlton Award of the U.S. Military Intelligence Corps Association.
